

by DM Cole 2020 Quoted from 21 “ Volatility-related PEs are associated with lower frontal activity in the CHR. 2009a; Insel et al. , 2010; Kapur et al., 2012; Cuthbert and Insel, 2013). To understand what's going on in our brains, we need to understand what attention is, how it works, and how we can stimulate it. In Chapter 1, we said that attention is the process by which we choose where to look when we are not looking. But as studies show, attention is not such a simple thing. Unlike most other processes, attention cannot be "trained". And even if we could do that, attention would still be a heterogeneous process.
